

D.C. Best & Worst Brunches of 2014

December 11th, 2014 | By The Bitches

What a year! We launched in New York and geared up for Chicago. We debuted an online shop, even new fashion columns and a travel section.

But it's the brunches that keep our world spinning. Those so-real-it-hurts honest reviews of the District's best and worst spots for your weekend binges—and believe it or not, we had more than a hundred of them in 2014.

But, we couldn't have conquered this year without the support of the tremendous businesses we're lucky to call our partners. Much gratitude goes to VIDA Fitness and Aura Spa, the EatWell Group, UrbanStems, True Currency, Lavagna, Beasley Real Estate, Wooden Nickel Bar Company, Whispering Angel Rose, Nail Saloon, PRESS Juice Bar, Pacers, Casa Oaxaca, Michel Richard's Central, Medium Rare, Piola and LaTomate Bistro.

Best Sustainable Brunch

We love the ambiance and sustainability ethic at Bidwell. We also love the set-up of the substantial menu and the willingness to innovate.
